...RADAR...

LAW FIRMS THRIVING IN THE RECESSION

Partners Employment Lawyers feature in an article in this week's Law Society Gazette- (Outlook Uncertain – 8th October 09- Press Page – Click to go to). Talking of managers' tendency to avoid lawyers and associated expenses, Gordon Turner (partner) comments:

“Some people are frightened of lawyers and avoid us” ... “The firm’s lawyers try to reassure clients they are not intent on prolonging proceedings”.

From time to time, we come across other employment lawyers, who seem absolutely intent on war when there are far more constructive ways to move things on. Sensible offers are ignored; positions overstated, communications needlessly aggressive and then, true to type, a deal is cut at the door of the Tribunal.

This is an absurd way to behave at any time, particularly in a recession; no Finance Director or shareholder would endorse spending tens of thousands of pounds on lawyers' fee only to agree with an offer made at the outset! In fact, if they were aware that this kind of thing was going on, they would want answers.

We have an excellent success rate in innovative and quick solutions to problems which could otherwise become a major headache. Sometimes a quiet word or a bit of positioning advice is all that is needed.
